🌙MR. SKUNKY LUKE: NIGHTLIFE
The Little Star Who Fell
The night sky over Whiskerville had always been full of stars.
But tonight, one of them fell.
Dragocat was perched on the old clock tower when a streak of blue light crossed the sky and disappeared behind the forest.
His compass immediately began to glow.
He flew toward the light and found a small crater glowing beneath the trees.
Inside was a tiny creature unlike anything he had ever seen.
It had soft silver fur, enormous violet eyes, and little glowing markings that pulsed like starlight.
The creature was frightened.
When Dragocat approached, it tried to hide beneath his wing.
Dragocat lowered himself gently beside it.
"You don't have to be afraid."
The little creature reached out and touched the glowing compass around his neck.
The compass changed color.
For the first time, Dragocat understood.
This wasn't an invader.
It was lost.
Far above them, another strange light appeared in the sky.
A spaceship was searching for it.
Dragocat spread his wings and carried the little creature to the highest hill in Whiskerville. The tiny being looked toward the stars and began glowing brighter.
The spaceship finally saw the signal.
Before leaving, the little creature hugged Dragocat around the neck.
Dragocat stood perfectly still, his golden eyes softening.
Then the little visitor stepped aboard the ship.
The vessel rose silently into the night.
The tiny creature pressed one paw against the window.
Dragocat lifted his own paw.
For a moment, they simply waved to each other.
Then the ship became another star.
Dragocat looked down at his compass.
It had stopped glowing.
But beside it, a tiny silver star now shimmered against his collar.
He smiled.
Another mystery solved.
Another friend found.
And somewhere beyond the stars, someone would always remember the Guardian of Whiskerville.
Because sometimes you don't rescue someone by keeping them.
Sometimes you rescue them by helping them find their way home. 🛸🐈‍⬛🪽✨

DRAGOCAT
MR. SKUNKY LUKE: NIGHTLIFE
Sometimes you don't rescue someone by keeping them... you rescue them by helping them find their way home.
CASE #3
THE LITTLE STAR WHO FELL